In this lecture I begin with a discussion and classification of various types of environmental externalities. These include reciprocal externalities, international externalities such as the Indonesian haze, and stock externalities. I then introduce the celebrated Coase theorem for tackling externalities and argue that the Coase theorem as such does not apply to these types of externalities.